ABSTRACT

The 28th in a series of Council for the Aid to Education philanthropic studies begun in the mid-1950s is presented. Information is provided on the following topics: (1) colleges and universities (national estimates, expenditures and voluntary support, survey results, voluntary support by type of institution, voluntary support by source, special forms of giving, voluntary support by purpose, alumni giving, and technical notes); (2) details of support by institution (definitions of classifications, colleges and universities, and independent elementary and secondary schools); and (3) independent elementary and secondary schools (survey results, voluntary support by type of school and by source, special forms of giving, voluntary support by purpose, advancement-program expenditures, and endowment). Findings include the following: there has been a dramatic growth in private giving; during the 1986-87 academic year, voluntary support of educational institutions grew by an estimated 15% and reached a record high of more than $9 billion; and since 1976-77, giving to colleges and universities has risen by 218%. Appendix tables are as follows: college and university data; independent school data; and colleges and universities, 1949-1950 to 1986-1987. (SM)

FOREWORD

We are pleased to present Voluntary Support of Education 1986-87, the 28th in a series of Council philanthropic studies begun in the mid-1950s.

Once again, we are able to report dramatic growth in private giving. During the 1986-87 academic year, voluntary support of educational institutions grew by an estimated 15 percent and reached a record high of more than $9 billion. This extends beyond a decade the pattern of "double-digit" average annual percentage increases.

Since 1976-77, giving to colleges and universities has risen by no less than 218 percent, or an impressive 59 percent when adjusted for inflation. For their part, independent elementary and secondary schools reporting to CFAE have seen total contributions quadruple over the same period.

Looking ahead to the next ten years, we would be optimistic indeed to predict that the rate of increase in private support will match that of the past decade. Already, there's evidence of slower growth in the academic year just ending. In view of the economic uncertainties of the times, a slowdown is no surprise.

Still, there is an ever expanding constituency of American individuals and organizations willing and able to "give to the college of their choice"; and the colleges are increasingly effective in articulating their case for support. So we look for continuing growth. You can be sure that CFAE, and the distinguished cosponsors of this survey, will do their best to encourage it.

Our thanks to these colleagues — the Council for Advancement and Support of Education and the National Association of Independent Schools — and to other organizations that assist us with this study. And, most important, we salute the more than 1,700 college and school administrators who worked hard to complete the questionnaires upon which the work depends.

The Sponsoring Organizations

The Council for Aid to Education, Inc. (CFAE) is a not-for-profit corporation based in New York City and funded by contributions from business. It was established in 1953 as the instrument of the business community charged with encouraging private support of education. It provides consulting and research services, conducts workshops and seminars, produces periodicals and "how to" manuals, and sponsors the public service advertising campaign "Give to the college of your choice."

The Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) is a professional educational association with 2,850 institutional members which offers programs of professional development and acts as a public affairs arm for U.S. education. Participants in its programs include fund raisers, alumni administrators, communicators, government relations officers and the managers of these functions in postsecondary and secondary institutions. CASE is headquartered in Washington, DC.

The National Association of Independent Schools (NAIS), Boston, is a nonprofit voluntary membership association of nearly 1,000 schools in the U.S. and overseas serving a total enrollment of 350,000 students. Its administrative and academic services to member schools include research reports, periodicals and manuals; an employment clearinghouse for school administrators; and leadership and professional development for teachers, administrators and school trustees.

National Estimates

Private contributions to colleges and universities climbed $1.1 billion in the 1986-87 academic year to an estimated $8.5 billion, a new record. The 14.9 percent increase over the previous year was powered primarily by an exceptional rise in alumni giving.

This extends more than a decade of steady growth, at an average annual rate of 12 percent. Since 1974-75, the last year which recorded a decline, gifts from private sources have quadrupled. Over this period a total of $57 billion in new cash and in-kind gifts have been made available to colleges and universities.

While the Council for Aid to Education does not make estimates of private giving to elementary and secondary education, independent schools clearly have also benefited from constituents' generosity. The 532 institutions participating in the 1986-87 survey reported total support of $503 million, with average support per school rising 16 percent to $944,790.

ALUMNI SET THE PACE

In higher education, the alumni and nonalumni donor groups each gave more than $2 billion for the first time, according to CFAE's estimates. Together, these individual donors provided 52 percent of all funds contributed to colleges and universities, the highest share since CFAE first began tracking voluntary support in the mid-1950s.

Alumni set the pace. Their giving soared 28.5 percent, and the dollar increase of $521 million was the largest ever for a single donor category. As a result, the share of total support accounted for by alumni reached 27.6 percent, again the highest in CFAE's records.

Meanwhile, nonalumni — trustees, faculty, parents and other friends — increased their contributions by $285 million, or 16 percent.

How to explain last year's outpouring of gifts from graduates and friends?

First, the pool of potential donors continues to increase, as the millions of young people who flooded into the colleges in the late 1960s and 1970s become more capable of giving. The U.S. Census Bureau reports that in 1970 only 11 percent of adults 25 years old and over were college graduates; by 1985, more than 19 percent of the adult population had earned four-year degrees. In just the last ten years, 10.5 million new bachelor's degree holders have appeared, plus millions more who have had some exposure to higher education.

Second, all institutions, public as well as private, have become more aggressive and sophisticated in their fund raising. Development offices have effectively broadened the base of alumni support and at the same time refined their cultivation of all potential donors. In the last decade especially, many more institutions have packaged their needs in ambitious capital fund campaigns aimed at replacing obsolete facilities, generating increased student financial aid, funding faculty salaries and research. During 1986-87, scores of these drives were in progress, and their combined goals totaled more than $16 billion.

Third, a booming stock market and generally favorable economic conditions helped sustain individual giving. Between July 1, 1986 and June 30, 1987 the Dow Jones Industrial Average rose by almost 700 points, and many investors were persuaded to share their substantial capital gains with the colleges of their choice.

Finally, the Tax Reform Act provided added stimulus. Faced with lower tax brackets and less favorable treatment of charitable contributions beginning in January 1987, many donors decided to give sooner rather than later, and quite a few were moved to speed up payment of pledges to capital campaigns. Envelopes bearing contributions swamped campus post offices at the end of December 1986.

SLOWER GROWTH FOR BUSINESS

While individual giving soared, corporate support of higher education grew at a slower — but quite healthy — pace. Corporate contributions increased 7 percent to $1.8 billion and accounted for 21 percent of total voluntary support. Two years ago, in 1984-85, corporations gave more than any other donor group and accounted for 25 percent of the total.

Slower growth in business giving was hardly unexpected: In fact, some experts had predicted a plateau if not an absolute decline in 1987. The slowdown follows ten years of increases averaging 15 percent per year, a higher growth rate than that of other donor groups. Given sluggish corporate profits in the first half of the 1980s and the continuing restructuring going on in the corporate community, double-digit growth in corporate contributions is difficult if not impossible to maintain.

Foundation gifts grew by 11 percent in 1986-87, to a total of $1.5 billion. The foundation share of total support continues to decline, however, dropping from 21 percent ten years ago to 17.8 percent, the lowest ever, in 1986-87. The strong performance of securities portfolios helped build up foundation grants: Private foundations are required by law to pay out at least 5 percent of their assets.

Religious organizations make up the only donor category to register an absolute decline in giving, falling by $7 million, or 3.3 percent, to $204 million. Religious groups have provided a shrinking share of total support since the late 1950s: In 1957-58, they provided 10.5 percent of total voluntary support to higher education; by last year their share had fallen to 2.4 percent.

Finally, gifts from "other" organizations — clubs, trade unions, state and regional fund-raising consortia — grew by 6.6 percent to $552 million. They accounted for 6.5 percent of all gifts in 1986-87, a share which has remained fairly constant over time.

The Council's estimates with respect to the purposes of gifts underline once again higher education's concern with capital requirements. Gifts for capital purposes — buildings, endowment, equipment — increased by 20.8 percent, more than twice the rate of increase in funds given for current operations. As a result, the share designated for capital purposes rose to 48 percent, the highest in nearly 20 years. Clearly donors were responding to the needs set forth in the numerous capital fund campaigns under way during 1986-87.

BOOSTING PURCHASING POWER

Virtually all the gains in voluntary support over the last five years have significantly exceeded the rate of inflation, whether measured by the Consumer Price Index (CPI) or the Higher Education Price Index (HEPI), which measures the "market basket" of goods and services that educational institutions must buy. Between 1981-82 and 1986-87, voluntary support rose by nearly 75 percent while prices increased 19 percent (as measured by CPI) and 30 percent (HEPI). Only in the case of support from religious organizations was the increase less than the inflation rate.

The result is a five-year rise of roughly 35 percent in the real purchasing power of voluntary support. Table 2 shows the growing importance of voluntary support relative to college and university budgets. In the past 12 years, it has increased from a low of 5.7 percent in 1975-76 to 7.4 percent last year. That is an average, to be sure: For many private institutions, gift income bulks larger in budget terms; for public institutions, which raise relatively fewer private dollars, it is lower.

But independent or state-supported, all institutions are looking to increased gift support to help make ends meet. On one side, college administrators face costs of modernization, providing student aid and improving teaching and research that persist in outrunning consumer prices generally; on the other, they have become the targets of mounting criticism from students, taxpayers and government officials for not doing a better job in restraining increases in tuition.

Despite the criticism, an expanding constituency of alumni and friends (including, notably, corporations) appears to recognize U.S. higher education's continuing need for private gifts. Certainly there has been some slowing in the flow of contributions following the October 1987 Wall Street debacle, and the 12-year pattern of double-digit percentage increases in support may well be interrupted in academic year 1987-88. But there is a great deal of momentum driving private giving to education, and barring a severe national economic downturn, the outlook is for continuing increases — though likely more modest than those reported by CFAE over the past five years.

The 1986-87 Survey

The national estimates of private contributions to all U.S. colleges and universities set forth on the preceding pages were calculated by the Council based on the findings of its annual survey of voluntary support of education. Experience over 30 years of CFAE surveys indicates that the reporting institutions account for about 85 percent of all private giving to higher education institutions.

The 1986-87 survey collected information on the amounts, sources and purposes of private gifts, grants and bequests actually received during the year beginning July 1, 1986 and ending June 30, 1987. The 1,174 colleges and universities participating accounted for $7.3 billion, or 86.2 percent, of the estimated $8.5 billion raised by all colleges and universities.

While the 1986-87 rate of response was the second highest on record, year-to-year participation varies greatly by type and control of institution. Based on program offerings and degrees conferred, institutions are grouped according to the classification structure used by the U.S. Department of Education. (See glossary on page 15.) Using this classification structure, Table 3 sets out the number of institutions and the voluntary support they reported for both 1985-86 and 1986-87.

WHO RAISED THE MONEY

The 1,008 four-year colleges and universities which responded comprised 86 percent of survey participants in 1986-87 and accounted for 99 percent of all reported voluntary support. The 166 two-year institutions were 14 percent of the survey sample and raised 1 percent of the funds.

Among the four-year institutions, 718, or 71 percent, were privately controlled; the remaining 290 were public colleges and universities. The privates secured two thirds of the funds reported by all four-year institutions, a share which has dwindled from 80 percent 20 years ago. More public institutions are now reporting voluntary support; this year there were about 100 more public institutions participating in the survey than in 1966-67.

The 154 doctoral institutions raised more than three fifths of the total reported support. The $2.49 billion tallied by the 56 private doctorals, averaging $44 million per institution, was the largest amount ever secured by a single category of institution. The public doctorals came second with $1.96 billion, or $20 million per school, followed by the 403 private baccalaureate institutions with $1.3 billion, an average of $3 million per college. The range in average support for the comprehensive and specialized institutions extended from a high of $9.8 million for the public specialized schools to $1.7 million for the public comprehensives. The public baccalaureate institutions reported the least support among four-year institutions, $29.6 million in total, or $722,000 per institution.

A total of 166 two-year colleges, or 13 percent of the two-year colleges nationwide, responded to the survey; 33 were private junior colleges and 133 were public community colleges. (This represents a decrease of 24 institutions from the number participating in 1985-86.) The two-year colleges reported private contributions of $65.5 million, with the private institutions raising $22.1 million, or $668,000 per institution, and the public community colleges $43.4 million, or $327,000 per institution.

PATTERNS OF CHANGE

For the third year in a row, responding institutions reported double-digit increases in total voluntary support. The $7.3 billion raised by 1,174 institutions surpassed the amount reported by 1,194 institutions in 1985-86 by $991 million, or 15.7 percent. This was the second largest year-to-year dollar increase, following a record $1.036 billion rise in 1985-86.

Over the past decade, total reported support has grown at an average annual rate of 13.1 percent per year. This year's total support is more than three times the $2.1 billion reported by 1,006 institutions in 1976-77.

Since the number of institutions responding to CFAE varies from year to year, two types of analysis are necessary to show changes over time. Using an average per institution corrects for different numbers of respondents in each year. And selecting those institutions participating in both the 1986-87 and the 1985-86 surveys — the "core" group — shows actual year-to-year changes. Table 3 presents changes in support by type of institution using both methods.

Average support per institution rose by 17.6 percent to $6.2 million. This average has steadily increased from $1.2 million per college 20 years ago. Almost all institutional categories had increases over 10 percent in 1986-87; the exceptions were the public baccalaureate and private two-year institutions, both reporting decreases.

The 1,015 core institutions, the largest "core" sample in any CFAE survey to date, registered a $914 million, or 14.9 percent, increase in total contributions. All types of institutions experienced gains over 1985-86. The rates of increase for the private and the public institutions were very similar, 15 percent for the private core institutions and 14.6 percent for the public colleges and universities.

While the private and public four-year institutions reported similar changes, the 20.7 percent increase for the public two-year core sample was nine percentage points higher than the increase for the private two-year colleges.

WHO DONATED THE FUNDS

Contributions from alumni surged in 1986-87, with graduates becoming the first donor category to give more than $2 billion to the institutions reporting to CFAE. Indeed, alumni accounted for almost half of the $991 million increase in total voluntary support. The gain in alumni support over 1985-86, as shown in Table 4, was $464.6 million, or 29.9 percent. This was the second consecutive survey in which alumni constituted the largest single donor group; in fact, their share of total support jumped three percentage points to 27.6 percent of all reported private gifts.

For the 1,015 core institutions (see Appendix Table B), alumni gifts rose 29 percent, the second year in a row they were up by more than 20 percent. Only the private specialized and two-year schools showed alumni increases less than 20 percent. Twenty seven institutions reported increases in alumni support of more than $5 million each.

Donations from nonalumni individuals — faculty, trustees, parents and other friends — followed closely behind alumni support, making up 24.2 percent of all reported contributions. Contributions from this donor group rose $257 million, or 16.9 percent, to reach $1.8 billion. Especially strong showings were made by the public specialized institutions reporting an $18.5 million, or 47.4 percent increase, and by the public two-year schools showing a $2.9 million, or 49.4 percent, rise.

Foundation grants accounted for a 17.8 percent share of total support, slightly less than in the previous year. Their share of the total has been shrinking since the early 1970s when foundation giving comprised close to a quarter of all gifts. Among the four-year institutions, the dominant foundation increases were to the public doctorals, up $69.4 million or 30.1 percent, and to the public specialized schools, recording a $14 million or 28.8 percent rise. On the other hand, the private specialized institutions recorded a decrease of 39.2 percent.

A turnaround occurred in foundation gifts to two-year schools. In the 1985-86 survey, both the private and public two-year colleges reported a fall in foundation support totaling $1.2 million. In 1986-87, they showed an increase of $3.2 million, a better than 50 percent rise for each.

While gifts from individuals have grown substantially over the past two years, increases in corporation contributions have been slowing considerably. Between 1975-76 and 1984-85, reported corporate giving increased at an average annual rate of 18 percent; in both the 1985-86 and 1986-87 surveys, the core institutions reported increases of only 8 percent.

Furthermore, in 1986-87 there was a marked slowing in corporate cash grants other than matching gifts. In fact, more than three quarters of the total $112.7 million increase in corporate support arose from gifts of surplus property, including a headquarters building valued at $40 million given by RJR Nabisco to Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, NC.

Among the four-year core institutions, virtually the entire increase in corporate support went to private colleges and universities. This contrasts with the 1985-86 survey, where giving to the four-year public institutions increased at a faster rate (9.6 percent) than to the private institutions (6.7 percent).

The slowdown in the pace of corporate giving was most pronounced for the doctoral institutions — both private and public — which receive 70 percent of all corporate funds. The private universities reported an increase of $21 million, only half as large as the increase reported by the core institutions in the 1985-86 survey. Corporate support to the public core doctorals, meanwhile, actually fell by $10 million, or 1.7 percent, compared to a $48 million increase recorded by these institutions in last year's survey.

Donations from religious organizations, the only category to register an absolute decline in 1986-87, continued to fall as a share of the total. Since the late 1950s religious gifts have steadily fallen from a 10 percent share to an all-time low of 2.4 percent in 1986-87.

Contributions from other organizations — clubs, unions, fund-raising consortia, etc. — accounted for 6.6 percent of the total. The predominant increases were for the private specialized institutions, up 57.5 percent or $7.9 million, and the public comprehensives, up 50.3 percent or $5.1 million.

SPECIAL FORMS OF GIVING

Over and above the total dollars raised from each major donor group, the survey also collects data on particular types of giving and tracks them over time. Included are bequests and deferred gifts from individuals, matching gifts from corporations and non-cash or in-kind gifts from both businesses and other sources.

Bequests. The proportion of contributions coming in the form of bequests varies randomly over time — Table 5 presents data for the last 11 years. In 1986-87, gifts from estate settlements amounted to $756.8 million, about a fifth of all individual gifts. After rising by a record $229 million in 1985-86, bequests increased by only $42.7 million. Consequently, most of the extraordinary increase in individual giving is attributable to living donors.

Appendix Table A provides details on the bequests designated for current operations and for capital purposes by type of institution. Overall, three quarters of the bequest dollars were given for capital purposes. Private institutions received a higher proportion of bequests for capital purposes than did their public counterparts — 76.2 percent for the privates and 69.4 percent for the publics.

Deferred Gifts. These "planned gifts," including charitable remainder trusts, pooled income funds and gift annuities, reached a record high in dollar terms and as a share of individual gifts. A total of $425.3 million was reported for 1986-87, 74 percent more than in 1985-86. This amount represents 11.2 percent of the total support received from individuals, the highest such percentage on record. Table 5 tracks deferred gifts for the last ten years, and Appendix Table A presents details by type of institution. More than four fifths of these gifts went to private institutions, with the private doctoral universities accounting for almost half of the increase.

Matching Gifts. Support received from businesses through their employee matching-gift programs is steadily increasing. Since 1966-67, when CFAE began collecting these data, matching gifts have grown from $4.2 million, or 2 percent of all corporate grants, to $129.0 million, or 8.2 percent. Nearly 90 percent of the colleges and universities reporting data supplied information on the number of gifts matched and their value, compared to two thirds in 1985-86. The size of the average corporate match increased by 8.4 percent to $270.

The importance of matching-gift monies varies considerably by type of institution (see Table 6). Matching-gift programs send more money to private-sector institutions than to the public, in every classification of institution. The matches are triggered, of course, by individual employees, retirees or directors making a gift to the college of their choice. These gifts are particularly important to the private baccalaureate institutions, where they make up 27 percent of all direct corporate gifts.

Non-Cash Corporate Gifts. In-kind business contributions to colleges and universities often take the form of company products and surplus property and equipment. In 1986-87, they accounted for 22.4 percent of reported corporate support. (Details by type of institution can be found in Appendix Table A.)

Corporate property gifts — usually large nonrecurring gifts of land, buildings and equipment — were 2.5 times higher than the dollar totals reported for 1985-86. Their total value in 1986-87 amounted to $139.1 million, including RJR Nabisco's gift of a $40 million building. As a share of total corporate support, property donations rose 5 percentage points to account for almost 9 percent of all corporate contributions.

the first time since CFAE began collecting these data in 1982-83. The total amount reported in 1986-87 was $215.9 million, compared to $231.4 million in the previous survey. The doctoral institutions (which receive about three quarters of these gifts) showed the largest decrease, a $15.9 million fall in product donations.

Other property gifts come primarily from individuals; they include gifts of land, houses, paintings, antiques and rare books. In 1986-87, the total reported value of these gifts was $232 million, a $39 million rise over the previous year. The year-to-year gain was quite similar to the increases reported in the past two surveys.

WHERE THE FUNDS GO

Table 7 shows voluntary support by purpose for colleges and universities participating in the 1986-87 survey, with comparative data for 1985-86. Of $7.3 billion reported in 1986-87, contributions for ongoing current operations amounted to $3.8 billion, or 52 percent, with the remaining $3.5 billion, 48 percent, allocated for capital purposes. Prior to 1969-70, capital giving typically accounted for more than half of voluntary support. But during the 1970s and early 1980s more funds were channeled into current operations.

The pattern is changing once again. For the third year in a row, capital gifts have grown faster than those for current operations. The 1986-87 gains in capital support for the core institutions were widespread, with the privates and the publics each showing increases of about 20 percent. The large capital fund-raising campaigns under way at many institutions clearly contributed to this upsurge in capital support.

A detailed analysis shows that more than three fifths of all capital support went to the institutions' endowment funds, with about 85 percent of these gifts restricted by their donors as to the use of the endowment income. "Property, buildings and equipment" came second. This is unchanged from the 1985-86 survey.

In general, donor purposes are not much changed from the last survey. In 1986-87, individuals gave 42 percent of their contributions for current operations, whereas corporations gave 63 percent and foundations 55 percent. About half of all contributions from foundations and corporations were designated for restricted current operations. On the capital side, individuals contributed 35 percent of their total support for restricted endowment.

The share of total gifts that are unrestricted as to purpose continues a four-year decline. In 1982-83 unrestricted gifts accounted for 29 percent of all voluntary support; now they comprise only 19 percent. About 72 percent of the gifts for current operations in 1986-87 were designated for specific purposes by their donors. This share has grown by four percentage points since 1983-84.

Table 8 presents data about the use of restricted gifts for both current operations and endowment for those institutions that could supply these details. The amounts reported represent large enough shares to provide insights into how donors want their gifts used. The distribution is comparable for private and public institutions; the purposes are similar to those in the previous two surveys.

Research received 34.3 percent of the $2.6 billion in restricted funds allocated for current operations, 24.7 percent went for unspecified other purposes, 18.9 percent for support of academic divisions such as schools and departments, and 13.4 percent for student aid. Over 90 percent of the research funds were given for current operations rather than to endowment.

Income from endowment gifts can also be restricted by donors. Of the $1.6 billion reported, student assistance led with 32.3 percent, followed by faculty and staff compensation with 18.4 percent and academic divisions with 15.4 percent. Here too a fourth of the funds went to unspecified other purposes. Faculty and staff compensation and student financial aid are more heavily favored by contributions to endowment than by those to current operations. Only operation and maintenance of physical plant showed a dollar decrease compared to 1985-86.

SIZE OF GIFTS

To assess the impact of major gifts on total support, the survey questionnaire collected details on gifts under and over $5,000 from individuals for current operations. Table 9 shows these gifts by type of institution. The dollar amounts represent 74.5 percent of total support from individuals for current operations as reported by all survey respondents. Average gift size cannot be calculated from these data because not all respondents reported both the number and dollar amount of the gifts.

Although gifts of $5,000 and over constituted but a fraction of the number of gifts (.5 percent), these gifts accounted for 44.7 percent of the monies received. Gifts under $5,000 accounted for 55.3 percent of the dollars and 99.5 percent of the number of gifts. The private doctoral and public specialized institutions secured a larger proportion of funds from gifts over $5,000.

Details on alumni giving for current operations showed gifts over $5,000 provided 37.2 percent of support; for nonalumni, 56.3 percent.

ALUMNI GIVING

To facilitate analysis of alumni fund raising, colleges and universities report additional data on alumni of record, number of alumni solicited and the number making a gift. These data are used to calculate the percentage of donors relative to the number of persons actually asked for support (solicitation-effectiveness rates) and average gift size.

WHO GAVE THE MONEY

Of 20.8 million graduates solicited by colleges and universities reporting these data for 1986-87, 4.8 million alumni made a gift. In 1985-86, 17.8 million alumni were solicited with 4.3 million making a donation. Appendix Table A provides details by type of institution.

Table 10 shows the number of alumni donors, solicitation-effectiveness rate and average alumni gift for institutions participating in both the 1985-86 and 1986-87 surveys. All classes of colleges and universities reported more donors, and almost all had larger gifts in 1986-87. On average, 22.4 percent of those solicited gave, up slightly from 22.3 percent in 1985-86. The average alumni gift was $399, up 21 percent from $329 in the previous year.

The percentage of alumni making a gift to all private institutions was 28.4 percent with an average gift of $504, whereas the public institutions reported a solicitation-effectiveness rate of 17 percent and an average gift of $240.

Most institutions conduct annual campaigns to raise funds for ongoing operations. Data on alumni gifts for support of current operations are presented in Table 10a for those schools reporting figures for both 1985-86 and 1986-87. Here the average gift was $168 in 1986-87, compared to $154 in the previous survey. The average gift ranged from $256 for the private doctoral institutions to $28 for the public two-year colleges.

TECHNICAL NOTES

Voluntary Support of Education is designed to obtain information on the amounts, sources and purposes of private gifts, grants and bequests received by educational institutions. Voluntary support excludes income from endowment and other invested funds as well as support received from federal, state and local governments and their agencies.

The 1986-87 survey collected data on funds raised from private sources for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1986 and ending June 30, 1987. Questionnaires were mailed to roughly 2,800 colleges and universities and 900 independent elementary and secondary schools. College and university participation, at 1,174, was 1.7 percent below the 1985-86 level, due primarily to a decline in the number of reporting two-year institutions. The number of elementary and secondary schools, however, reached an all-time high of 532, 12.4 percent greater than the 1985-86 survey.

In no year since the survey was begun in 1954-55 have as many as half of the institutions of higher education responded. In recent years, the actual response has numbered between 1,100 and 1,200 colleges and universities out of some 2,775 invited to participate; the 1986-87 response rate was the second highest on record. Despite yearly changes in both size and composition of the group of institutions taking part in the survey, the Council estimates that the amounts reported have averaged about 85 percent of the total voluntary support received by all colleges and universities.

Survey participation varies greatly by type and control of institution. Institutions are classified by the U.S. Department of Education based on program offerings and degrees conferred. The composition of the 1986-87 sample was as follows:

| Type and Control | Number | Number Responding | Response Rate (%) |

More details on the participation record for 1986-87 are provided in the adjacent listing of institutions whose surveys arrived too late for tabulation and of those which were unable to supply details. In addition, 13 institutions reported receiving no private support during the fiscal year.

Technical Notes:

A. In the listing on the following pages, "Educational and General Expenditures" does not show the total operating expenditures of the reporting institutions; it excludes the operating costs of dormitories, dining halls, student stores, and other "auxiliary enterprises" as well as all outlays of a capital nature.

B. If the column is blank, school did not provide information. Blanks can be interpreted as either information is not available or no support was reported.

C. In some instances the number of institutions listed is greater than the number tabulated, for two reasons: 1) some multicampus institutions are shown in summary as well as in detail; and 2) some of the component professional schools of major institutions are also listed separately.

INDEPENDENT ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Survey Results

The number of schools responding to CFAE's annual survey increased for the second year in a row. The 532 respondents in 1986-87 raised an average $944,790 per school, a 15.5 percent increase over the average $818,076 reported by 473 schools in 1985-86. Total support reached $502.6 million, an increase of $115.7 million.

The breakdown of support by type of school, according to the level of program and type of student body, is shown in Table 11. Girls schools received the smallest amount of support, both in average per school and total dollars. Although the coeducational schools raised the most, the boys schools had the highest average, $1,198,597 compared with $918,610 for the coed schools and $820,756 for the girls schools.

Since the number of participants varies from year to year, two types of analysis are necessary to show changes over time. Calculating the average support per school corrects for different respondents in each year. However, trends can be shown most clearly by analyzing the "core" group — those 401 schools participating in both 1985-86 and 1986-87 (see Appendix Table D for complete details). They reported a 22.8 percent increase in total support in 1986-87, about 8 times greater than the 2.8 percent inflation rate as measured by the Consumer Price Index.

ALUMNI, PARENTS GIVE MOST

Table 12 presents data on the donors of voluntary support while Appendix Table D shows a more detailed breakdown of donor gifts by type of school.

Alumni, parents and friends of the schools together provided over four fifths of total reported support, with alumni supplying the most, 34.7 percent, followed by parents and other individuals. Based on average support per institution, gifts from individuals increased by 21.3 percent in 1986-87. For the core group, giving by alumni rose 30.4 percent, parents 37.0 percent and other individuals 17.7 percent.

Gifts from foundations decreased as a share of total support. They comprised 11.7 percent of the total in 1986-87 compared to a 14.4 percent share in 1985-86. Both the average per institution and the amount raised by the core group from foundations fell.

Average corporate support per school rose 16 percent, and the 401 core schools reported a 21 percent increase in corporate donations over 1985-86. The $23.3 million donated by corporations translates to the same 4.6 percent share of total contributions as in 1985-86.

Religious groups donated $2.9 million, or less than 1 percent of the total, with other organizations contributing $10.4 million in 1986-87. Contributions from both of these donor groups fell this year whether measured by average support raised per institution or by giving to the core schools.

SPECIAL FORMS OF GIVING

Bequests and deferred gifts — such as trusts, pooled income funds and annuities — are often used by individuals in their estate planning to benefit independent schools. In 1986-87, $27.7 million was reported in estate settlements and $12.5 million in deferred gifts. Together these gifts accounted for 10 percent of all contributions from individuals and 8 percent of total voluntary support. Additional details about bequests and deferred gifts by type of school can be found in Appendix Table D.

Matching gifts accounted for 35 percent of the total $23.3 million in corporate contributions. They totaled $8.0 million in 1986-87, a $2.1 million increase over the amount reported in the previous year. The average corporate match was $395, the same as that reported for 1985-86.

Gifts of company products and other property were 9.2 percent of corporate donations, up from a 5 percent share in 1985-86. The increase was due to gifts of company products — the total value of product donations increased from $484,000 in 1985-86 to $1.8 million.

Property gifts from noncorporate sources more than doubled in 1986-87, rising from $2.8 million in the previous year to $7.2 million. This type of giving includes major gifts of real and personal property such as land, houses, paintings, antiques and rare books.

ALUMNI GIVING

Details on alumni gifts for all purposes and for current operations by type of school are in Appendix Table D. The solicitation-effectiveness rate — the percentage of donors relative to the number of persons actually asked — was 30 percent for overall alumni giving. The average alumni gift was $472 compared with $397 for 1985-86. For current operations, solicitation effectiveness was 38.6 percent and the average gift was $171, up from $155 in the previous survey.

WHERE THE FUNDS GO

Table 13 looks at changes between 1985-86 and 1986-87 in the purposes of gifts as specified by donors. Support for capital purposes was almost twice that for current operations in 1986-87, with capital gifts increasing at much greater rates than gifts for ongoing operating expenses. Unrestricted donations — for both current operations and endowment — amounted to 42.9 percent of all contributions, down from 45.1 percent in 1985-86.

Table 14 examines the purposes designated by specific donor groups. For the past three surveys, all types of individual donors — alumni, parents and others — have directed a larger share of their total contributions to capital needs. About two thirds of the 1986-87 gifts from individuals were designated for capital purposes. Foundations contributed almost four fifths of their gifts for capital purposes, while corporations, religious groups and other organizations designated a larger share for current operations.

Almost all of the gifts for current operations were unrestricted. Foundations were the only exception here; almost three fifths of their support for current operations was restricted.

Over 30 percent of the total contributions from alumni, other individuals and foundations were designated for property, buildings and equipment. Slightly more than half of all capital gifts were designated for the schools' endowments. Most donor groups placed restrictions on a larger proportion of their endowment gifts; two donor groups who had more unrestricted donations to endowment, however, were parents and other organizations.

SUPPLEMENTARY DATA

To facilitate studies of fund-raising effectiveness, schools were asked for additional information on enrollment, endowment, total educational expenditures and advancement-program expenses. Table 15 presents advancement-program expenses as a percentage of school expenditures and of total voluntary support by type of school. For all schools reporting these data, fund-raising expenses were 4.1 percent of school expenditures and 14.8 percent of total giving in 1986-87.

Data on total endowment and endowment per student by type of school are shown in Table 16.
